SUBJECT Admiral Stansfield Turner

JOEL SPIVAK: ...I just saw the door open and the DCI just walked in. As a matter of fact, he's walking right into the studio.

How are you, Admiral Turner?

I didn't think -- Stansfield Turner just walked in here. I didn't think I'd be talking to you again.

ADMIRAL STANSFIELD TURNER: Different subject than yesterday.

SPIVAK: This fellow on the phone, Admiral, his brother is down there at that St. George's medical college.

And what'd you say, Mark, you talked to him last night?

MAN: Right. I spoke to him last night. There's still communication there. I called this morning, also, and I wasn't able to get through to his particular line. But they still have communication with the island itself.

SPIVAK: And he said his brother told him that the Grenadian military was anticipating something like this, so they were already digging trenches around the island. I guess they must have figured something was going to come, Admiral.

ADMIRAL TURNER: Well, the word got out yesterday that we had sent forces down there in preparation. So I'm sure they were concerned about that. I can't imagine that the Grenadian
